Built to Last

Structuring the Family Business for Continuity

Chidi Nwosu

FREE SAMPLE

Chapter 1

Shareholding, trusts, boards and holding companies, explained for family business owners. Build a structure that protects both the business and the family.

Every family has a story about the day something went wrong and nobody knew where to start. This chapter looks at ownership structure and why it matters for continuity. If a shareholder died tomorrow, what would happen to their shares? Reflect on this before moving on, and note one thing you could change this week.

Every family has a story about the day something went wrong and nobody knew where to start. This chapter looks at trusts and why it matters for continuity. If a shareholder died tomorrow, what would happen to their shares? Reflect on this before moving on, and note one thing you could change this week.

Every family has a story about the day something went wrong and nobody knew where to start. This chapter looks at boards and why it matters for continuity. If a shareholder died tomorrow, what would happen to their shares? Reflect on this before moving on, and note one thing you could change this week.

Every family has a story about the day something went wrong and nobody knew where to start. This chapter looks at ownership structure and why it matters for continuity. If a shareholder died tomorrow, what would happen to their shares? Reflect on this before moving on, and note one thing you could change this week.

Every family has a story about the day something went wrong and nobody knew where to start. This chapter looks at trusts and why it matters for continuity. If a shareholder died tomorrow, what would happen to their shares? Reflect on this before moving on, and note one thing you could change this week.

Try this: Map who owns what in your family business today.